WhatsApp or Text Scam

Here's how this scam works:

- A fraudster pretending to be a family member, often a daughter or son, starts a believable conversation with the recipient.
- They will say they are messaging from a new number as their phone was lost or damaged.
- Typically, the 'child' is short of money or is late paying bills, and asks the recipient to transfer money into an account.

In some cases, the victim has been careful enough to check with the relative and has realised it's a scam before parting with any money but this is not always the case—
